City or country?

A

I've lived in a big city here in Brazil for the last ten years, but I was brought up in the country. I much prefer living in a big conurbation like this as I think it teaches you tolerance. In your day-to-day life, you come into contact with a whole host of different types of people, and you get to understand their situation a lot better than if you lived a closed off, more sheltered life in the country.

Fernanda, Brazil

В

Country for me, every time. Here, we have space to live our lives like real people. I can go for a walk in the fresh air, my dog has plenty of space to run around in and we can see the stars at night. What you city folk don't understand is that we don't have to live on top of each other, and were never meant to.

Stuart, UK

C

It's much cheaper to live in the country. In terms of property prices, for the same amount as a one-bedroom apartment in New York, I could afford a four-bedroom house with a garden and a pool here. And that's just the start. My grocery bill is much cheaper, as are eating out and entertaining. I can afford to drive a car, so I don't have to rely on public transport, either. All in all, it's a better quality of life here.

Anthony, USA

D

If you want any kind of social life, then you have to live in the city.

Adalene, Paris, France

E

In my country, it's often a case of necessity. In the countryside, the air is clean and fresh, it's much more polluted in the cities, so that's a benefit of living rurally, but there just isn't any work there. For me, quality of life depends on finding work. Since I'm an engineer, this has to be the city for now. Henu, Indonesia

F

I would say any discussion of whether one is better than the other just oversimplifies the issue. When I was little, for example, I used to love living in the country. I could go and play for hours in the fields and forests near where we lived. In the summer holidays, I would go out with friends on our bikes and only come back for dinner. But as I got older, I found there just wasn't enough to do, and it was pretty dull, so I moved to Toronto, which is much more exciting. I can see myself moving back to the country when I'm older and I want to settle down and maybe have kids myself. So surely it depends more on your age than anything else? Chris, Canada

G

People talk to each other more in the country. In the village where I live, every time you leave your house you'll see one of your neighbours, and we always stop and say 'hello', and have a chat. Not only that, but we have regular get-togethers, such as the village barbecue, in the summer. You really feel part of a community, and you just don't get that in the city. Cathy, Ireland

H

I have two small children, and wouldn't dream of bringing them up in the city. Every day, the news is full of reports of children going missing, violent attacks, robberies, and the like. It seems to me that you can't go out of your front door in the city without facing some kind of danger. No, it's much better to bring up children in the country, where they can play outside without fear.

Introducing points in an argument

- 7a Read the text below about global tourism. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as an effect of the increase in tourism?
  - 1 poor working conditions
  - 2 ecological damage
  - 3 unemployment

Tourism is the world's biggest industry. In 2010, there were just over a billion tourists worldwide; this number is expected to rise to 1.6 billion by 2020. With improved transport, cheaper flights and increased leisure time, many of the countries of the developing world are rapidly becoming tourist meccas. Since the 1960s, mass tourism has become increasingly specialised, encompassing sporting and adventure holidays as well as ecological tours. Although the tourist industry employs more than 235 million people worldwide, the benefits of tourism are not always felt at a local level, where jobs are often low paid and menial. Unregulated growth of tourism is also causing both environmental and social damage.

A tale of two countries

- A The first thing that struck me was that everything was so small. The roads were really narrow, and the traffic weaved its way between tall, thin buildings, which looked like they'd been squeezed into the street like wafers in a chocolate biscuit. The elongated, red, double-decker buses snaked carefully between the avenues and main roads, picking up and dropping off their fares like ants on their way to fulfilling their daily purpose, whatever that might be. It felt really strange, as though I was looking at the world through odd-coloured spectacles although I was seeing the same, familiar street corners and places that I'd known for most of my life, this time they didn't feel familiar.
- B It was so different to how I'd expected it to be. I'd loved most of the two years I'd spent in Volgograd, in the south of Russia, but in those last few months I'd realised that what made me enjoy it was partly and it was a large part the knowledge that I'd soon be returning home, to the family and friends I knew and loved, and the milder (though still often awful) weather London had to offer. The time I'd spent on the steppe had been a real eye-opener as far as experiencing a different culture was concerned. When I'd first arrived, fresh off the plane at Sheremetyevo Airport in Moscow, I'd been all too eager to make friends, and went out of my way to be polite wherever I could. Most of the time, my attempts to strike up conversation were met with icy stares and brusque, one-word replies. I'd started to think that Russians were a cold people, and I was unlikely to ever make any new friends.
- C 'I think you're not having a good time here' was how Ludmilla, the secretary at the school where I was working, invited me for dinner with her family. 'You will come for dinner with my family on Sunday, I won't take no for an answer.' I was so relieved. When I turned up, flowers and wine in hand, I was enveloped in warm handshakes, inviting hugs, warm laughter and murmurs of 'ochen priyatna' (very pleased to meet you). The meal was eaten, a few toasts were drunk and by the end we were discussing our deepest wishes, fears and hopes for the future. Whether that was partly due to the vodka we drank, I'm not sure, but I do know it was largely because Russians are actually warm, friendly people, but just too proud to wear their hearts on their sleeves with people they don't know.
- D Another thing I'd learnt about Russians is the way the men show their respect for women, both young and old. One day, I had a rather unfortunate incident on the bus. I'd been sitting there, minding my own business, deeply engrossed in the book I was reading, when I started to notice a quiet murmuring all around me. I looked around, and noticed how the people to my left and behind me were looking across at me with disdain and whispering to each other. In front of me was a young woman, looking at me in disgust. Just when I was about to ask, in my broken (at that point crippled, in fact) Russian if something was wrong, a man in front of me got up and offered his seat to the young woman, whose face transformed in an instant to an angelic smile as she accepted, and sat down. I had been so ashamed I got off at the next stop and walked the extra six blocks home.
- E Now, back in London, this place that used to feel like home but now looked somewhat artificial, I had suddenly found myself in the same position. There I was on the bus, and a smartly-dressed, young woman got on. Looking round, I noticed with a panic that there were no other seats free. Proud of what I'd learnt, I eagerly leapt to my feet and offered my seat. When she looked surprised and told me she was 'OK, thanks', I was mortified. I felt like a balloon that had deflated prematurely, and I instantly blushed bright red. Once more, I got off early and walked. It was going to take a while to get back into the swing of things.

Fancy that!

ramey ander
A horse and a sheep were walking past a bar one sunny day. 'Fancy a cold drink?' said the horse. 'I 've been pulling (pull) a cart all day, and it's thirsty work, I can tell you.' The sheep 2 (sit) in a field all afternoon, with no protection from the sun: the only thing he <sup>3</sup> (have) to drink all day was filthy water. 'I know what you mean,' he said. 'I 4 (think) about a cold glass of cola since about 12 o'clock.' So they went inside. The horse ordered two colas and reached over for the menu.
'I fancy something to eat as well,' he said. 'I <sup>5</sup> (eat) ten sacks of oats so far this week, and I'm just about sick of them.
I don't think my owner <sup>6</sup> (hear) of a balanced diet.'
'Too right,' said the sheep. 'I need a change, too. I fancy a burger.
(you / try) the burgers here?' The horse replied that it was the first time he <sup>8</sup> (eat) there, too, but he decided to have the same, with extra cheese. Then he remembered he <sup>9</sup> (not go) to the lavatory all day, and he needed to go urgently. 'Any idea where the lavatory is?' he asked his friend. 'No, I don't.' Just then, a dog who (sit) at a nearby table came over and said,
'Please forgive me, but I 11 (listen) to your conversation, and I can tell you that the lavatory is downstairs, on your left.' The sheep turned to the horse with an amazed look on his face. 'Fancy that! I <sup>12</sup> (never see) a talking dog before!'

The Hundred-Year-Old Man Who Climbed Out the Window and Disappeared

One of the best books I've read this year is called The Hundred-Year-Old Man Who Climbed Out the Window and Disappeared, by Jonas Jonasson, which was recommended to me by a friend. It's a fictional tale, and the main story is set in Sweden. It tells the story of Allan Karlsson, the protagonist, as he goes on a journey across the country, leaving a trail of chaos behind him. It also tells the story of his earlier life in parallel.

The story opens as Allan is about to celebrate his 100th birthday at the retirement home where he lives. Despite his age, he is both physically and mentally alert, and so he decides to climb out of the window and 'disappear'. He gets hold of a suitcase full of money, and ends up being pursued by both drug dealers and the police. On his way across the country, he teams up with people he meets on the way, and we learn about their interesting – and rather odd - lives. There are several subplots throughout the story, which involve Allan's earlier life, including meeting President Truman, Winston Churchill, Mao Zedong, and how he invented the atom bomb. Little by little, you realise that he was actually behind some

It's an unapologetically hilarious book, which makes you laugh out loud in places. Some of the events are beyond belief, but it's enjoyable nonetheless, and very heartwarming, and you'll very quickly fall in love with the main characters. But behind the comedy, it leaves you with a feeling that anything is possible, and we are all truly in charge of our own destinies. As the protagonist himself says, 'Anything can be achieved through the power of positive thinking' of the most important events of the twentieth century.

I won't give away the ending completely, but suffice to say it all ends happily. Both the drug dealers and the police eventually catch up with Allan, but as to what happens when they do, well, you'll have to read the book for yourself and find out.
